Gradually, but with increasing volume, capital was the form of gold exports, which her republican defeat it all those states. came so large that after this act had been in force two years and a half a genuine alarm filled the public mind.

The papie of 1803 was the consequence. it was caused by the election of Cleveland and a democratic congress. They availed themselves of the maxim Post hoe propter hoe to the fullest extent, and they persuaded the workingmen of the country, who had lost employment and had had their wages cut down, that this was the true cause of their sufferings. The workingmen finance, and although the democratic party, under the lack of President Cleveland, actually did the only thing that could possibly restore confidence whelming majorities for a republican congress.
